Frankfort Board Seeks Co-operation

The Frankfort Village Board and Mayor George Sangmeister have been debating how to solve a local question without causing any extra expense to the village and the problem on hand is that of Halloween. The board has been doing its best to provide amusement for the youth of the town by way of a ball diamond and a skating rink and in as much as the board has been co-operating with the youngsters of the village, the village dads now feel that the young people should co-operate with the village board as far as Halloween is concerned. If the young folks will not carry out the usual depredations and not make it necessary for the village board to hire special police, the village will continue to do things for the young folks, but if they do not do so, then the village board will be obliged to withdraw their support of the projects they have been aiding for the benefit of the youth of Frankfort.

Cleaning Frankfort Water Tower

The Frankfort village water tower is being given a thorough cleaning and repainting. So far over a ton and a half of rust and settlements have been cleaned from the tower and a more pure and clean water supply is now assured. The tank is being repainted with red lead and two coats of graphite. Leaky spots in the tower are also being welded. E. H. Bryant of Monmouth, Illinois is the contractor in charge of the work.

Seek To Curb Speeding In Tinley

Tinley Park, like other local communities has been confronted with a speeding problem on Oak Park ave., the main thoroughfare of the town and as a result of this situation the village clerk was instructed at the meeting of the board on Tuesday night to communicate with the State Highway Department, asking them to have a representative at the next meeting of the Board in order to reduce the speed limits for automobiles on Oak Park ave.

Stock Hickory Creek With Bass

The New Lenox A. C. in order to provide for better fishing in the Hickory Creek, stocked the creek last Sunday with two cans of black bass which they had received from the state fish hatcheries. The fish were placed in the creek near the Harry Storms farm.

Passes Insurance Examination

Melvin Whitaker of New Lenox recently passed a successful insurance agent's examination before the state insurance department and has received his credentials that he is now a full fledged fire and casualty insurance writer. Mr. Whitaker has established his office in New Lenox and is now ready to take applications for insurance of various types.

To Hold Mardi Gras Parade

Frankfort is a bee hive of activity right now making preparations for the biggest event of the year in that community by way of a Mardi Gras, the first of its kind ever to be held here. The affair is scheduled for two nights, October 27 and 28 and will be in keeping with the Halloween season. The affair is to be a very gala one with colored costumes and a real carnival spirit.

Here are a few of the many features being worked on: A quilt display, Dennison home craft work, antiques, artificial flowers. Prizes will be awarded for best exhibits.

There is to be a wide variety of entertainment in which will be included band concerts, shooting galleries, various booths and dancing on Saturday night. There will be a variety of noise makers, caps, etc. On Saturday night, October 28th a huge carnival parade will be staged and will march through the principal streets of the town and wind up at the school gym where the Mardi Gras will be staged under the supervision and sponsorship of the Frankfort Civic Club. Admission will be free on Friday night, October 27th, but on Saturday night, October 28th a charge of 10 cents will be made for those attending without costume.

Watch for more particulars next week of this extraordinary event. Reserve your dates for these two gala nights.

To Hold Boy Scout Troop Exam

The Boy Scouts troop which was formed at Frankfort sometime ago, now numbers 18 members from the village of Frankfort and the Lincoln Estates. The boys have been under the leadership of True Daniels of Tinley Park.

The Civic Club of Frankfort has agreed to be sponsor for the Frankfort Scouts and the following committee has been named: George Sangmeister, Clark Bennett, Edw. Vollrath, Edw. Warning and Herbert Folkers, Wm. Breidert has been appointed scoutmaster.

An examination of the Scouts is to be held at the Frankfort school auditorium on Thursday, October 26. All the boys who pass this examination will be taken on an undisclosed Halloween night hike but a great deal of fun is in store for them. All boys wishing to join should do so now.

Is Attending P. M. Convention

Miss Margaret Maue, Mokena postmistress left Sunday for Washington, D. C., to attend the national convention of 5,000 postmasters. A trip will also be taken to the Arlington cemetery and many other points of interest. The New York World's Fair is also on the itinerary.

Oswald-Homerding Nuptials Solemnized In Orland Church

At the St. Michael's Church in Orland Thursday afternoon, Oct. 5, Miss Margaret Homerding, daughter of Mrs. Earl Homerding became the bride of Edward Oswald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Oswald with Rev. Father Rooney officiating. Miss Margaret was given in marriage by her brother, Owen. Attendants were Miss Lillian Oswald, sister of the bridegroom and Robert Homerding, brother of the bride.

The bride was very attractive in a princess style gown of white satin and her long veil of white tulle was fashioned with a cap of rhinestones. Her only jewelry was a gold cross, while her bouquet was of baby mums and lilies of the valley.

The bridesmaid's dress was of Spanish taffeta of American beauty shade and her headpiece was a shoulder length veil with a tiara of flowers.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the home of the groom's parents, with approximately 160 present.

Mr. and Mrs. Oswald left on a short honeymoon to Kentucky and on their return will reside with the groom's parents.

Bunco and Card Party at St. Mary's Hall In Mokena

A bunco and Card Party will be given by the St. Mary Parish of Mokena at the St. Mary Hall on Friday night, October 20th. There will be prizes and refreshments. Everyone invited.

D. A. R. To Place Marker on Revolutionary War Soldier's Grave

Mrs. Eugene Rogers, Regent of the General Henry Dearborn Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution with headquarters in Chicago, called on Mayor Harry Mall of Mokena and on Editor Semmler of the News-Bulletin Wednesday morning advising them that at a board meeting of the chapter named on Tuesday, it was unanimously voted that the D. A. R. place a granite boulder marker on the grave of Charles Denney, Revolutionary War soldier in the Mokena Memorial Cemetery on Wolf Road and that the present government head stone be used as a foot stone on this grave.

Mrs. Rogers advises that the D. A. R. will stand the entire cost and expects to have the stone ready for dedication on Armistice Day, November 11th.

As soon as the stone is ready a picture of it together with the inscription which is to appear on it will be printed in this paper.

A program of dedication in which the Mokena Civic Asso., Garden Club Mayor and Village Board, Chas. B. Elder of the Sons of the American Revolution, the Editor, the state Regent of the D. A. R. and others will take part will be prepared soon and will be presented in connection with the dedication ceremony.

At one time it was thought a bronze plaque might be placed on the present marker on the Denney grave, but the D. A. R. has learned that over 300 of these bronze plaques have been chisled from soldiers grave markers in the Chicago area by junk dealers and it has therefore been deemed best to erect an entirely new monument.

Watch for further details.

Will Co. Girls 4-H Clubs Carry Off High Honors

Carrying off highest county honors in girls' 4-H Club work this year are seven girls who were named as outstanding club members at the 4-H Finish-Up School held in Joliet on Tuesday, Sept. 26.

They are: Erma Schumacher, Elwood; Margaret McClure, Manhattan; Alice Goist, Plainfield; Mary Crego, Plainfield; Ferne Helene Craig, Wilmington; Dorothea Eisenbrandt, Frankfort; and Rina Smith, Wilmington.

Records of these girls now will go to the state club office at the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, and will be among those considered for the state honor roll of outstanding club members. Honor roll decisions will be made in October.

Named at the finish-up school also, were 34 girls who share honors as 1939 county project champions. They are: Class A—Romaine Mutchler, Wilmington; Myrna Noble, Wilmington; Betty Jean Marti, Mokena; Norma Akeman, Jackson; Alice Goist, Plainfield; Mary Crego, Plainfield; Dorothea Eisenbrandt, Frankfort; Ardis Elenwood, Jackson; Esther Krapf, Manhattan; Betty Jayne Johnston, Wilmington; Margaret Rott, Plainfield; Lucille Plesse, Wesley; Lois Myers, Jackson; Jeanette Eisenbrandt, Frankfort; Lois Weitendorf, Frankfort; Mabel Carretto, Jackson; Eleanor Kopelman, Homer; Margaret McClure, Manhattan; Helen Goodwin, Wesley; Erma Schumacher, Jackson; Ferne Helene Craig, Wesley; Mary Catherine Marti, Mokena; LaVonne Kirchner, Wesley; Mary Phelps, Plainfield; Marjorie Hasenjaeger, Frankfort; Phyllis Johnston, Wilton; Shirley Palmer, Jackson; Martha Jean Johnston, Wilton; Ruth Croxen, Peotone; Helen Jones, Wesley; Catherine Reddy, Wesley; Bonita Griffin, Florence; Eleanor Cooley, Wilmington and Gladys Krapf, Manhattan.

Also, Class B: Marie Rademacher, Jackson; Wilma Akeman, Jackson; Anna Mae Garetto, Jackson; Helen King, Plainfield; Shirley Begler, Wilmington; Esther Croxen, Peotone; Dorothy Drew, Wilton. Class C: Virginia Gee, Homer; Anita LaGrange, Wesley; Anna Baker, Wilton; June Groth, Green Garden; Hazel Janssen, Mokena; Betty Armstrong, Florence; Mildred Van Duyn, Wilmington; Clara Belle Sipple, Green Garden; Isabelle Elliott, Wheatland.

From these girls and from project champions named in other counties will be selected state project champions. These decisions, also, will be made at the final reckoning in October.

Selections on Tuesday were made by the 4-H leaders, working with Mrs. Edith M. Huffman, home adviser and Mrs. Elsie Butler, district 4-H club adviser, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois. The committee made decisions on the basis of the project achievement record of each girl, on her activities in 4-H club work and in the community, on her record book, and on the story of her 4-H club work during the year. Considered, also, was each girl's attitude toward her fellow club members and their work and the responsibility she assumed in the local club and community.

Project champions are chosen as the result of excellent work in one project during the club season of 1939. Outstanding members are chosen after detailed consideration of their work over a period of years. Edith M. Huffman explains. All the girls attaining finish-up honors scored more than 85% out of a possible 100 points in the official 4-H achievement score card used in the state finish-up work.

Mokena Man Has Exciting Experience In Canada

C. S. Nebeker of Mokena had a thrilling experience recently while traveling in Canada according to an article appearing in "Swift Arrow", a house organ of Swift & Co., Chicago:

"Hey, Buddy, what's yu think yu're doin'?"

"C. S. Nebeker, hotel department salesman, jerked to attention. What he saw proved his suspicions were only partially correct. In that split second before he looked up he figured it was a hold up. The object against his ribs he had decided was a sawed off shotgun. He scolded himself mentally for having had the window of his Swift car open, otherwise he might have made a run for it.

"But his eyes rested on no thug. There was no sawed-off shotgun in his ribs. The man outside was a Canadian soldier and projecting thru the window of the car was the business end of his rifle.

"Now to go back a bit. Nebeker was returning to Chicago from Portland, Maine, over the Labor Day week-end. He had routed himself thru Buffalo, crossing the Niagara River into Canada, and at the moment of his encounter with the Canadian soldier was stopped on a bridge while he examined his road map to determine whether to turn right or left as he left it. He found out.

"The soldier listened to his explanation, examined his credentials, and then saw him to the end of the bridge, which, incidentally, was over the Welland Canal. There he waved Mr. Nebeker on his way with the admonition, 'Keep away from bridges in Canada if yu're up this way again while we are at war, because the next guard might be nervous and his trigger finger itching to prevent sabotage.'

"Never again" vowed the Swift salesman, as he drew a sigh of relief and again headed his car for home."

Mokena PTA Drive

The P. T. A. drive is on this month for membership. Won't you please come out and join us? We have planned some interesting programs this year. You can be a member without payment of dues which is 25c per year, however, paid membership entitles you to vote and hold office. We are striving to get every parent interested enough to hold a membership card in our local P. T. A. If you have not already enrolled we again extend a hearty invitation to you to join. Our next meeting is October 24th. Mr. Elmer Cooper is program chairman for October and he has Mr. Bottino, Supt. of schools as our guest speaker. Come out to our next meeting won't you please?

Bunco Party

A card party will be held by the Home Bureau on Friday night, October 13th in the St. Mary Hall in Mokena at 8 o'clock. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

New Lenox Man Found Dead In Car

Paul R. Senter, 30 years old, New Lenox, was found dead Sunday morning in his automobile, parked about a half mile east of Lincoln highway on Gougar road.

Coroner Lonus B. Brannon said the death was suicide. No motive was attributed.

Deputy Leonard Kochevar said that when Senter was found, he was sitting in the front seat of his automobile with a hose carrying fumes from the exhaust pipe thru the left front window of the closed car. The motor of the automobile was still running.

Attended Dance

An investigation by Deputy Kochevar, who assisted Sheriff James O'Neill in the case, revealed, he said, that Senter had attended a dance at the Black road rifle club Saturday night with his sister, Mrs. Alice Nelson, and Miss Nellie Osmus, 1010 East Washington.

Mrs. Nelson returned home with a friend, and Senter brought Miss Osmus back home about 12:15 o'clock Sunday morning. He was "in good spirits" when he left, apparently to go home.

The death was discovered by Paul and Edward Hall, 129 Independence avenue, who told the sheriff that they were on their way to a junk pile nearby for tin.

Bought Hose Saturday

Walter Palmer, a brother-in-law of Senter, with whom he resided in New Lenox, identified the body after he was notified by Deputy Kochevar, who traced the ownership of the car thru the license plate.

Palmer told the deputy that Senter had told him he purchased the hose from a loop hardware store Saturday afternoon, ostensibly to use at his work at the Central Laundry where he was employed.

Coroner Brannon said that death occurred about 2:30 o'clock Sunday morning. He said an inquest would be held shortly.

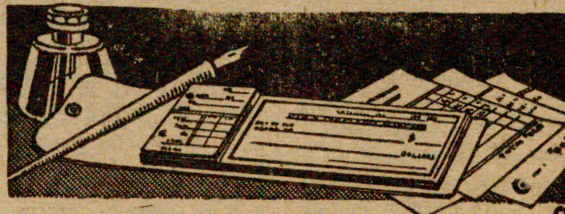

Funeral Tuesday

Surviving are a daughter, Jo Ann; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harve Senter; three sisters, Mrs. Louise Watkins, Mrs. Julia Palmer, and Mrs. Alice Nelson; and three brothers, Herbert, Harve, and Robert.

The body was taken to the Sonntag Funeral home, and later taken to Petersburg, Ill., where funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon.

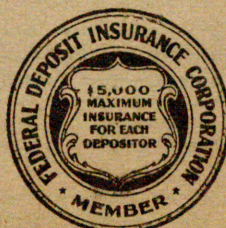

Will Open New Funeral Home

Carl and Edwin Hirsch, both former Mokena boys and widely known throughout the eastern as well as the southern end of Will and Cook counties by their work as funeral directors, have purchased another funeral home site in Chicago Heights and are having one of the finest funeral homes in this section built. They expect to hold open house to the public for an inspection of the new home a week from Sunday. The Hirsch Brothers have operated the West End Funeral Home in Chicago Heights for some time and also have been operating a funeral home in Tinley Park the past few years.

Europe's a Great Place If You Want to Reduce; War Brings Ration Diets

By MARIE BENNETSON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
LONDON.—Tanks, machine guns and airplanes to the contrary, an army still travels on its stomach.

And in wartime, it's still the folks back home who must tighten their belts and make the most of a weekly food ration that lets them up from the dinner table minus that "satisfied feeling." America's World War food restriction, which featured "meatless," "wheatless" and "sweetless" days, were child's play compared to restrictions now imposed on civilians in Germany. Here's the rations for one week:

Meat, including the precious sausage, 17½ ounces, including the bone. Butchers are reported trying to sell pig heads because bones will then be reckoned as only 10 per cent of the weight.

Fats, 80 grams, or less than three ounces of butter; four ounces of margarine or oil, two ounces of lard, bacon or tallow, and two ounces of cheese.

Sugar, about nine ounces; syrup or jam, 3½ ounces.

Bread, five German pounds, reduced if the rationee buys flour.

Coffee's a Fake.

Groceries, 25 grams (or less than an ounce) of barley, yellow corn, flour, rice, oats, spaghetti or similar foods; 25 grams of starch products; four ounces of coffee substitute.

Skimmed milk, all you want. Regular milk, a pint and a half daily for children up to six years old; half pint daily for older children, and a pint daily for pregnant women and young mothers.

Flour, less than a pound a week. Soap, one piece of utility soap and 2½ ounces of toilet soap. Shaving soap, one stick a year. Potatoes and onions are not rationed, and Germans can buy all the fish they want—except that none are available. This winter there'll be one egg a week for every German.

But food prices, both in Germany and Britain, are kept low. Germans who are able try to supplement fundamental foods with high grade vegetables.

Britain Has Full Larder.

By contrast, France has no food problem, being principally an agricultural nation. And Britain, although she has distributed ration cards, has vast amounts of foods stored in her larder. Moreover she is still able to import while Germany is hemmed in by a blockade. Probably the Reich can count on Russia for some raw materials, but not unless she can supply the Soviet with manufactured items in return. And German factories are kept busy turning out war supplies.

The importance of food in winning a war is not overlooked by military experts, who agree that victory always goes to the nation with the greatest physical resistance. This is a psychological factor, too, for a well-fed soldier at the front goes weak when he learns that his family back home is hungry. That is one reason Germany has cut off all communications between civil and military groups during the present war.

Reich in Bad Spot.

It was food that won the World War, and Germany is making a bad start in the new conflict. For in 1918, at the very end of the last war, Great Britain was eating better than the Germans are today. Then Britain's weekly domestic consumption of meat per person was 1.54 pounds. There was one-half pound of sugar, .45 of a pound of fat and 6.57 pounds of white bread and flour. Contrast this with Germany's current rations.

On the other hand, the Reich is accustomed to thin diets. Ever since National Socialism came into power it's been a choice between butter and guns, and guns have usually won. Several weeks before the current hostilities began, German housewives were ordered to limit their weekly purchases. Hence the people are psychologically and physically prepared for food rationing, having learned from experience how to get the most nourishment from the least amount of food. Americans would probably starve on the same diet.

President spikes notion of politics being adjourned during the emergency . . . Comparing Chamberlain's problem and that of Roosevelt's . . . Political speculation now centers largely around Vandenberg . . . Lifting of all sugar quotas regarded as a constructive action.

WASHINGTON.—Two moves by President Roosevelt effectually spiked the notion of "politics being adjourned" during the emergency. One was the President's refusal to accept Alf M. Landon's challenge that Roosevelt issue a statement saying he would not be a candidate for a third term. The other was the White House explanation of why Landon was invited to the neutrality conference at all.

Landon was invited, the White House explained, because he was the "titular head" of the Republican party, since he had been that party's last candidate for President.

The explanation as to why Landon and Frank Knox, Landon's running mate in 1936, were invited came as a result of a question by newspaper men as to why Herbert C. Hoover was not invited. Coming, as it did, on the heels of the talk about politics being adjourned, this was more or less of a joke. When a government seeks to adjourn politics, of course, it always calls in the heads of the opposition. So far, so good, but Landon is not the head of the opposition to the New Deal, and nobody knows it better than Franklin D. Roosevelt himself.

When the war emergency came in Britain, Prime Minister Chamberlain called in Anthony Eden and Winston Churchill. Why? Because they had been the real leaders, in the minds of the British people, against the Chamberlain policies. Actually, Chamberlain did not call them into the cabinet until after he had abandoned the policy they had opposed—appeasement. He did not call them in until he was ready to follow the policies that Churchill and Eden had been advocating—war rather than mere appeasement.

Comparing Chamberlain's

Action With Roosevelt's

Chamberlain did not call in leaders who were going to oppose his new policy. He would have had to call in pacifists, who had been and still were as far on the one side of him as Eden and Churchill were on the other. Of course that would have been unthinkable when war had been decided upon.

It would have been comparable to the President's calling in Senators William E. Borah, Gerald P. Nye and Arthur H. Vandenberg to the neutrality conference.

There is another difference that must be noted. Chamberlain gave Eden and Churchill important posts in the government. Roosevelt was only asking Landon and Knox to a secret conference. Further than that, he attempted to circumscribe the publicity which should be given out about the conference.

Curiously enough, this so irritated Landon that he did not go as far in endorsing the President's side of the neutrality controversy as he had intended to do before coming to Washington! As a matter of fact the statement he had intended to make public on arriving in Washington, but which Republican House Leader Joe Martin persuaded him not to give out, went all the way in endorsing repeal of the arms embargo.

It was this same irritation of Landon which resulted in his subsequent call on Roosevelt to disavow intentions for a third term, which annoyed Roosevelt more, incidentally, than anything that has happened for a long time.

U. S. in European Conflict

Would Boost Roosevelt

If Washington observers in both parties are right in figuring that the European war will last a long time, and that eventually the United States will get into it, the political results inside this country are ponderable. Best judgment is that this situation would make the re-nomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt almost a certainty, with the strong probability that he would be re-elected.

If there is any political lesson to be learned by the course which the American people followed in the last war, enthusiasm for the war party comes first, and resentment for getting us into it lags behind. No one at the time doubted the vast majority of the people were behind Woodrow Wilson through 1917 and 1918—right up until his appeal for a Democratic congress. Individual reports from congressional districts and from states in which senators were up for election conclusive that President Wilson would have retained control of congress had he not made that appeal.

Yet in 1920 there was no doubt whatever that resentment against the Wilson Administration for getting us into the war played a big part in rolling up that tremendous majority against James M. Cox, which swept Warren G. Harding into the White House.

To cite a specific illustration, Clarence C. Dill was a representative from the Spokane district of the state of Washington, and as such voted against declaring war. He was beaten in the next election as a result. But—a little later he was elected to the United States senate largely because the state approved his vote on the war issue! He remained in power, incidentally, long enough to help in the nomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932.

Speculation Now Centers

Largely Around Vandenberg

Washington speculation centers largely at the moment around Sen.

Senator Vandenberg

Now we have Vandenberg and his chief opponent, Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio, in opposite camps on the neutrality issue, with the obvious probability that they will continue on opposite sides of every question which comes up affecting the war.

If Vandenberg were no older than Dewey this might be an ideal situation for the Michigan aspirant. He could let Taft take the 1940 nomination away from him, be beaten by Roosevelt, and then sweep into office, as Harding did, after the inevitable reaction has come. In this case, in 1944.

Not that Vandenberg will be too old in 1944. He will be only 60. But at his present age that seems a long time to wait. Also, he is in danger of becoming shopworn. By 1944 he will have been talked about and rejected as the presidential nominee ever since most of the younger delegates can remember. More important, he will have been casting votes in the senate—assuming he is re-elected next time (for otherwise he would be relegated to the has-been class and not considered at all)—every one of which will be a potential danger to his chances.

Lifting All Sugar Quotas

A Constructive Action

Unquestionably the most constructive action taken by the administration against the probability—as insiders in the government see the picture—of a long war was the action of President Roosevelt in lifting all sugar quotas.

In September, 1919, nearly a year after the Armistice, the prevailing retail price of sugar in the United States was 25 cents a pound. There were some instances of 30 cents being charged, but 25 cents was general. During the war itself regulation held down the price to 11 cents, but there was an acute shortage, sugar was rationed, and people who had their meals at restaurants were given tiny individual portions instead of being offered the old-fashioned bowl.

Whereas just recently, before the war became a certainty, sugar was sold at chain stores for 10 pounds for 45 cents! And would have been cheaper had it not been for the quota system.

It is fair to admit at this point that 4½ cents a pound for sugar is lower than it should be, if those who produce it are to be adequately compensated. Sugar is the one and practically only article of general consumption which has not doubled in price in the last 35 years.

There is no objection on the part of the government to sugar producers making a living. In fact it is the policy to encourage a mild rise in sugar prices. But not as skyrocketing, such as occurred after the removal of the World War restrictions, and not a shortage.

Sharp Rise in Price Held

Down by President's Move

The world is producing more sugar, or more accurately, has a potential sugar production much greater now than in the World War days. It was only in 1929 that Henry L. Stimson, fresh from the governorship of the Philippines, told a congressional committee that it would be impossible for the islands to produce more than 500,000 tons of sugar a year. The Philippines within a couple of years after that pushed their production to more than 1,000,000 tons.

But now every sugar producing area that supplies the United States is restricted by a quota. This goes for the Philippines, for Porto Rico, for Hawaii, for the Louisiana and Florida cane growing sections, and for the beet sugar states.

Removal of the quotas permitted Cuba to ship into the United States all the sugar it could sell, thus holding down what might have been a sharp rise immediately in the price American housewives had to pay. But the more important phase of the situation applies to next year, and the years to follow, and tends to prevent a sugar shortage, which would affect every individual in the country.

Lowenthal Solves A Problem

By SCOTT W. RYALL

(Released by McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

MR. LOWENTHAL entered the Ninth ward police station sadly. He looked old and weary as one might well be, who is an earnest merchant, waking occasionally from his financial duties to find his one great hope roosting in jail.

"Lowenthal," Captain Atkinson began without preliminary, "your kid got up another gang. You know he was president of the outfit called the Night Riders we broke up?"

The Ninth ward's jeweler nodded his head dully.

"Sure. Sure. But listen—what can I do with him? I busted a brush. I gotta belt that don't make no impression except he howls."

"Well, that's your problem!" the captain said angrily. "We've had just about enough of him. Last night he broke into a cigar stand."

"I already paid Blumley for the damage," Lowenthal said hastily, "and it wasn't just Izzy."

"No, it wasn't just Izzy!" the officer snapped, "but those other boys wouldn't have been there if your son hadn't thought the scheme up. Their fathers will tell them where they get off but, Lowenthal, I'm getting sick of turning Izzy's case back to you. There's another way."

"You mean," the old man said painfully, "the reform school?"

"As sure as I'm running this station. Better that one goes up than the whole bunch. This time," he said gruffly to the weoful father, "he's going home with you but the next time—Lowenthal, the next time I won't even call you in! Come along."

Lowenthal followed meekly out to the cells and when his son, Izzy, popped up from the cot it needed no second glance to see that his captivity had bred impatience but not repentance.

"Hi, Pop!" he called through the bars. "Jeez! It's about time you got around."

The policeman had the keys in his hand but stood looking thoughtfully, coldly, at the thin arrogant face of the boy.

"Izzy," he said forcefully, "I'm not letting you out just because you want to go. You don't like it in there but have you thought how it would be if you were cooped up until you were twenty-one?"

"Aw, gee, Cap, we were just horsing around."

"Izzy," Lowenthal said hoarsely, "you hear what Captain Atkinson says?"

"Sure, I heard it," the boy mumbled angrily. "I heard enough of what Cap says. Let's get out of here."

Suddenly Lowenthal's face set grimly.

"Captain," he said firmly, "will you get me a belt, please?"

Atkinson's eyes twinkled. "Gladly," he said briefly and quickly detached one from his trousers.

The boy looked startled at the impending and semi-public indignity. He started to blubber and when his father made the threat more realistic by asking the officer to open the door, he howled in earnest.

Izzy tried to dodge but four walls penned him close and in a moment he was wriggling helplessly under his father's firm grasp.

When Lowenthal had finished, he tossed the belt to the policeman and forcibly sat the boy back on the iron cot.

"Izzy!" he called sharply, then repeated it as a sterner command while the boy ignored him.

"Yea?" he asked tearfully.

"That's from me. A good licking. You got it coming. You got a lot more coming. You're a smart boy, ain't you? A wise feller, too clever to be decent!"

He stepped briskly from the cell and slammed the door.

"Pop—" Izzy started.

"All right," the father persisted, "I give you your licking, you wise feller that thinks it's hopsy to be a thief! Now, you think maybe I'm going to haul you home? Home with me? 'Yah," he taunted, "think again, Izzy. The reform school for you and we'll have no more—"

The boy burst into a deafening howl of fear; of hasty repentance. Lowenthal took the captain's arm and quickly guided him back into the corridor.

"Lowenthal," Atkinson remonstrated, "don't you think he's had enough?"

"Listen," the merchant said excitedly, "I licked him and left him in prison. All alone, see? Well, he'll think now. He'll think about his sore bottom, anyway."

"Still," the other said hesitantly, "I kind of hate sending a kid to the school without giving him one last chance."

"The school doesn't come in. You keep him three days. Then bring him around and say you persuaded me to take him in again. You see, he'll believe I'll let him go to prison next time instead of trotting down here to haul him out."

Atkinson was grinning broadly. "Then there won't be any next time," he said.

The father looked fondly back toward the cell and listened to muffled sobs.

"I guess," he said confidently, "you guessed it, Captain."

Mechanized Warfare Rolls on Wheels But You Can't Beat Horses in a Pinch

Europe Again Clamors for U. S. Cavalry Mounts,
Mules, Work Horses.

By LELAND PRENTICE

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WASHINGTON.—European war demands are already keeping American horse traders up nights. The army mule and cavalry horse have come into their own again despite a lot of talk about mechanized armies, and the United States may once more become the source of supply for France, Britain and other nations, just as it was during early days of the World War.

But while foreign buyers are scouring farms and ranches of the West for war horses and pack mules, there are at least two elements working against them.

First, there are only about half as many horses to choose from as in 1914-18.

Second, the American Humane society hopes to shut off even that supply. A few weeks ago it asked President Roosevelt "in the name of humanity . . . to include animals in the list of supplies that may not be supplied to belligerents."

Recall World War Rush.

Old timers on the western ranges recall how European buyers swarmed through the mountains 25 years ago, paying high prices for horses and mules to replace those which had been shot, gassed or worn out on the battlefield and on shell-pocked roads.

Today's buyers would find only 10,800,000 horses and 4,382,000 mules in the United States, against 21,431,000 horses in 1915 and 4,239,000 mules in 1910. This 50 per cent decline is attributed to mechanization of the farm, a movement in which tractors and trucks are cultivating, hauling and plowing where horses and mules formerly supplied the motive power.

Riding Horses in Poor Shape.

More important, the type of animal has changed. There are plenty of heavy draft horses nowadays, but these are too slow and eat too much for army use. The buyers would find a fairly good supply of medium-sized draft horses, suitable for pulling guns and wagons, but there are only 4,500,000 animals in the entire nation suitable for the most important wartime use—cavalry. And most of these riding horses are too old or too young, too light or too unsound for the heavy tasks of waging war.

Horse cavalry regiments are still an important unit of the average army, despite mechanization. France has 42 such regiments against only five regiments of mechanized cavalry. Germany has 17 horse cavalry regiments and England has only five, principally because she fears she would be unable to obtain a continuous supply of animals.

Canada, oddly enough, has only two such regiments, while Italy maintains 12. Japan, which has no mechanized cavalry, maintains 25 mounted regiments. The late Polish cavalry, counted on to raid German troops in the recent eastern war had the autumn rains arrived on time, was the world's finest. Russia, big in everything, has no less than 90 horse cavalry regiments ready to take the field.

Exports Up in 1914.

During the World War American horse exports jumped from 22,776 in the year ending June 30, 1914, to 189,340 in the following year. Of this latter number, France took 130,000 head; England bought 83,839; Canada, 53,036; Italy, 20,634; Scotland, 6,908.

As war continued, the demand became greater. Private ranch stock and riding horses went under the hammer and in the year ending June 30, 1916, exports reached the peak of 357,553 head. The following year the United States shipped 136,698 head of mules, but after that our own army took all surpluses.

The recent Polish war, in which the vanquished army depended so much on its cavalry, did not disprove the value of animals in combat against mechanized forces, for had the conflict lasted longer inclement weather would undoubtedly have placed heavy tanks and troop trucks at a disadvantage.

Prologue to Love

SYNOPSIS

Lovely, independent Autumn Dean, returning home to British Columbia from abroad without her father's knowledge, stops at the home of Hector Cardigan, an old family friend. He tells her that she should not have come home, that things have changed.

"What a lovely thought," Autumn observed eagerly. "But was Grandmother Odell such a heart-breaker, Hector? I have never been told much about her. For that matter, they have never spoken much of mother, either—and I have always wanted to know—" Her voice faltered and she shrugged her shoulders as if to dismiss the subject.

Hector took the bell from her hands and held it thoughtfully on his palm, stroking the satiny texture of its semi-spherical upper half with his eloquent fingers. "The Odell women," he said slowly, "had small respect for hearts."

Autumn leaned back, resting her elbows on the mantelpiece behind her, and glanced up at him diffidently from beneath her lashes. "Even mother?" she asked.

He swung the bell just perceptibly, and the eerie threne of it, a vanishing wraith of sound, caught at her throat. It might be the mingled tears and laughter of a ghost heard from infinity. Hector did not reply at once.

"You knew mother very well, didn't you?" she prompted him. "She couldn't have been more than ten years younger than you."

"Millicent Odell—" It might have been the wine he had had, Autumn thought, but it seemed to her that for an instant he was quite oblivious of her presence. His narrow, brown face with its myriad fine seams glowed as though he were listening ardently to the music of that name, the name of her mother, twenty years dead. Then he glanced down at the bell once more. "I have fashioned a little conceit about this bell, Autumn. Perhaps you would like to know what it is."

"Do tell me, Hector."

He smiled boyishly. "It is like the Odell women. Its beauty casts a spell over a vast distance. Its music echoes and re-echoes into eternity—and haunts you forever. It is an elfin soul, my dear, and its power is blackest magic."

Autumn clasped her hands and laughed with delight, although an incomprehensible tremor stirred within her. "You were meant to be a poet, Hector—not a collector of antiques," she said gayly.

The doorbell rang and Hector went quickly to answer it. Autumn's luggage had arrived.

Autumn Dean reined in where the road curved out to a steep incline above the town, and looked back down upon the diamond-studded valley she had left. When she was a little girl she had thought of the town of Kamloops by night as a jeweled brooch lying on a bed of black velvet, the river a ribbon of dim silver festooned about it.

The miles slipped away behind her, and now she recognized the features of her father's land, the beginning of those thirty thousand acres that led sheer up into the dusk of the southern mountains, and spread fan-wise to the river on the north. There on one side of the trail was the somber promontory now, that jutted out like a monk's cowl above the abandoned copper mine, and on her right the grassy trail that led through ghost-gray hummocks of sage up a steep hillside and down again to the sheltered valley where the lambing corrals were. She paused to listen for a moment, and across the dim solitude came the lonely tinkle of a sheep bell.

The sound carried her poignantly back to her childhood, when she had ridden her pony on spring evenings such as this—the Laird's disapproval notwithstanding—to visit old Absalom Peek, the faithful herder, where he tended the lambing ewes. At the sweet thrust of memory her eyes filled with tears. She shook the reins and followed the trail westward along the valley.

Here, at last, was the little schoolhouse, with its pile of seasoned firewood, its pathetic little outhouses, and its elfin host of memories that lurked in every shadow and danced before her under the pale light of the stars. What had become of that troop of boys and girls with whom she had romped in the days when she herself had been one of them? The Careys and the Cornwalls, the Lloyds and the Murrys? Just there, under that dark pine, young Larry Sutherland had washed her face with a handful of the first snow of the year. And here young Sandy Cameron had fought with Bruce Lander who had elected himself her champion—though she had been a mere slip of eight or nine years at the time, and Bruce had been five years her senior—Bruce Lander, whose father had shot himself down there in the little ravine that ran through the northern end of the Dean acres. She had often thought of Bruce, the wistful-eyed young dreamer, always a little sad because of the tragedy that had befallen him, and of his spirited mother, who had struggled along somehow and ruled the Lander ranch with a fierce will that had won the respect of the countryside. It was ten years since he had bade her a rather lofty and grown-up good-by when, at eighteen, he went away to college. She had been thirteen then, and had wept despondent, little-girl tears at the departure of her hero who had outgrown her. Before his return for the summer vacation, she herself had been despatched, protesting, to England.

Three miles beyond, she came to the massive pillars of field stone that stood at the entrance to the Castle of the Norns. The name suited the place as it had done when she was twelve years old, her fancy steeped in ancient lore. Her father had been pleased with the name she had chosen for the odd pile with its curious gray stone turrets and parapets, the like of which had probably never adorned another ranch house in all the world. Uncharitable people in the community had called it "Old Dean's Folly," but Autumn had adored it from her earliest memory.

She checked her horse to a walk as she rode up the gravel approach between the tall pines. A light was discernible now in the east tower of the Castle. Her father's study was there, and he himself would probably be seated now in his deep leather chair, lost to his surroundings in the pages of one of his old and beloved books. Except for the subdued glow of the light in the spacious hall the house was in darkness. Old Hannah, the housekeeper, who had been Autumn's nurse, would have gone to bed long since.

"I tell you it's me, darling!"

Now from within the house a dog barked—once, twice, a deep-throated and ominous sound: Autumn hurried up the steps and glanced through the heavy glass panel of the door. Her father's great Irish wolfhound was coming down the staircase with his loping, magnificent gait. Se tried the door, found it unlocked, and entered.

Old Jarvis Dean, his heavy briar stick in his hand, was coming slowly down behind the dog. At the first sight of her he let his cane fall and supported himself with one hand on the shining black balustrade. The other moved slowly across his brows.

Autumn rushed up the staircase. "Hello, Da!" she cried, and flung her arms about his stooping form. "Don't faint, darling, it's really me! Down, Pat, you jealous old thing!"

"God bless my soul!" Jarvis exclaimed. "What's this, what's this!" "I tell you, it's me, darling!"

Her father placed an arm tremblingly about her and held her for a moment without speaking. Presently she heard his voice, a voice almost a whisper, the defenseless voice of a sleepwalker.

"Autumn—my little Autumn!"

She thrust him back from her, laughing with excitement. "Oh, Daddy—let me look at you!"

He stooped and picked up his cane, then turned and took a couple of steps up the stairway. His great voice resounded in the hall. "Hannah! Hannah! Come down!" He beat his cane sharply on the stairs. "Hannah, I say!"

The old woman's voice responded from above, breathless from excitement. "I'm coming, I'm coming. What in the world has happened?" "Come down, you dunderhead, and see for yourself!"

He turned to Autumn and put his fingers to his lips to warn her against crying out. Then he began walking uncertainly down the stairs, Autumn moving before him, her voice vivid and young in the austere silence of the lofty hall.

"O, Da! I can't tell you what it means to be home again." She turned upon him suddenly and threw her arms about him once more. "I didn't say a word to you about my coming, darling, because I—I didn't want you to know. I wanted to surprise you."

Autumn kissed him and laughed. "What difference does it make, you dear rascal! We belong together—and we belong here. That ought to be reason enough for anything."

"Reason? Reason? There is no reason in anything you do. You're a woman, and the devil himself is in women! But go into the room there and get some light on you so I can see what you look like."

Autumn turned from him and skipped toward the doorway that opened into the drawing room. She pushed the button on the wall and the long room became flooded with a pleasant amber radiance. Autumn clasped her hands as she stood still for a moment, her senses possessing the room, making its simple harmonies her own again.

Jarvis seated himself before the white marble fireplace, where a pink glow slumbered in the violet-colored ash. From a tiny, lemon-hued satin settee opposite, Autumn looked at him. His long, bony hands were clasped above his cane, his leonine head jutted forward, and there was in his eyes a naked look—was it fear or mere perplexity? Autumn did not know.

A hideous feeling came upon her that this was not her father at all who sat facing her, but some grotesque old changeling with a demon-ridden soul. His eyes burned as he searched her face, his massive hands clenching the arms of his chair.

A tremor took possession of her so that her shoulders quivered involuntarily. She twined her fingers tightly together and bent forward.

"Tell me—what is wrong?" she said softly.

The old man's body seemed to sag, exhausted, into the depths of his chair. "Your mother's hair—burnished as October," he said absently, then lifted his head slowly. "Nothing is wrong, my child, nothing."

The sound of Hannah's footfall on the stairway broke the moment's spell and Autumn got up as the old housekeeper hurried nervously into the room.

"Hannah!"

The woman halted suddenly, her hand clutching at her breast. She eyed Autumn incredulously, then drew her breath in a quick gasp. Autumn hurried toward her and put her arms about the bowed shoulders.

"Hannah—don't you know me?" The only immediate response was a sob that shook the old woman's frame as she clung to Autumn.

"My baby—my baby!" Hannah said at last, her voice thin and broken and incredibly old.

Autumn drew her close and soothed her with little words of endearment remembered from her childhood. "Hannah, Hannah! Little old Muzzy-wuzzy!"

Jarvis Dean drew himself up ponderously in his chair. "Come, now!" he thundered. "There'll be time enough for that! Put the kettle on the fire and make us a pot of tea."

Hannah drew away and Autumn patted her affectionately on the shoulder. "Yes, Hannah, make us some tea. We'll have days and days to talk. I'm never going to leave home again."

The old woman pattered away to the kitchen and Autumn sat down again on the satin settee.

"So you are counting on staying here," her father said.

"If I have to turn sheep and run with the flock, Da," Autumn laughed.

Jarvis Dean's head sank forward on his chest. "Were you not well enough off with your aunt, then?" he asked her.

"I have nothing against Aunt Flo, Da. She has always been lovely to me."

"What brings you home, then?" Jarvis Dean's voice was deep, his breathing labored.

"I'm fed up with all that meaningless existence—and this is my home." Autumn's voice quivered and broke at the realization of the fantastic heartlessness of the situation. Bewildered and appalled and crushed, she struggled to regain control of her voice. "Do you mean—really don't want me here, Da?" she asked.

The old man shifted uneasily in his chair. "Here? What kind of a place is this for a girl like you?" he demanded.

Autumn's eyes darted helplessly from one object in the room to another, as though she were seeking refuge from the overwhelming and cruel stupefaction that had come upon her. "Why—whatever can you have against my being here—I can't believe—"

Her father held up his hand with a peremptory gesture. "What did I tell you in England last Christmas when you wanted to come back here with me?"

"I never believed that you really meant that I couldn't come back. Why, it's—it's the most unreasonable thing I've ever heard of. We've always had such wonderful times together and I—"

Jarvis Dean rose abruptly to his great height and the anguish in his face wrung her heart in amazement and mystification. "Let's talk no more about it," he said with an effort. "You have come and you will have to stay—for a decent length of time, anyhow—or people will have something to wag their damned silly tongues about. I'll not have them saying things—about the Deans."

A change came over him, so swift and brilliant that the horrible thought swept through Autumn that perhaps he had, for the agonizing period just past, been mentally deranged. His head, with its smooth waves of white hair, rose proudly, a half mocking smile played about his stern mouth, but his eyes were wistful as he came toward Autumn with his hands outstretched.

She got up quickly and put her arms about him, beating back the tears that threatened. "Poor old Da!" she said softly. "I should never have come if I—"

"Enough of that! You are here." He turned from her. "What's keeping you, Hannah?"

"I'm coming directly," Hannah replied querulously.

The old man shook his head slowly. "She's about done, that one," he muttered. "She's more misery to me than she is help, but there's nothing I can do about it. I can't kick the old dunderhead out at her time of life."

"The more need you'll have for me about the place, Da," Autumn observed archly.

Her father turned on her brusquely. "It'd be a poor creature that couldn't get along better without either of you," he told her.

"That'll be enough of that fool talk for this night," said old Hannah as she entered the room and came toward them bearing her loaded tray.

Autumn laughed and placed a small table before the fireplace as her father sank once more into his chair.

CHAPTER II

Jarvis Dean stood before the great windows in the hall, looking out upon the world where the light of early morning was aflame above the spires of the pines. He moved away once and called up the stairs to assure himself that Autumn was getting ready for the ride she had insisted on taking with him into the sheltered ravine where the lambing was in progress. When she replied, he strode back to the window and looked out upon the softly lighted mosaic of the world that was his. As he stood, weary and haggard from a sleepless night, it came to him that it had been better had he sold it last winter when he had had a substantial offer for it. Why had he not sold it? He was getting old. Pride, pride! Pride and vanity. Vanity of possession, of power, of triumph! Yes—that had been it—triumph! The triumph, as he had thought, of his own conscience over a catastrophe of twenty years ago. That was why he had stayed on here, stubbornly, bitterly, when his world had seemed ready to crash about his ears after the death of Geoffrey Lander, and then—Millicent.

Ah, Millicent, forever loved, forever lost! Her slender red smile, red still as she died in fever, red in the undying love of another, slender in hatred of himself, seemed to pierce the brooding east now as he stared at it with vacant eyes.

"Fool, fool!" he muttered to himself. "I might have known—I might have known!"

He turned as Autumn, dressed for the ride, came down the stairs.

"Let's go!" she sang out, and stood before him slapping her boots with her quirt.

Two horses stood before the door, Jarvis Dean's big black and Hector Cardigan's hunter. In a moment they were in the trail and heading eastward over the way that Autumn had come the night before.

They were on their way to visit old Absalom Peek at his camp in the ravine. When they turned at last from the main trail and took a winding path that led toward the camp, Autumn remembered a roundabout and more picturesque way to the place, down through a gully where a tiny creek ran and where the white birch grew in a dense wall up either slope. Lander's Gulch it was called locally, partly because one-half of its length marked the boundary between the Lander and the Dean acres; partly, too, because it was down there beside the creek among the birches that the body of Geoffrey Lander had been found years ago by one of his own men. The years had dimmed the details of that tragic story, though they had served only to deepen the legendary color that invested it. Years ago, old Hannah had told Autumn that sheep herders had encountered Geoffrey's ghost among the white birches there, of a moonlit night in spring, and had heard his voice calling to his sheep-dogs when the wind came up from the river. Autumn had all but forgotten the legend, but its memory smote her now as she drew rein and turned her horse toward the gully.

"Come on, Da!" she called. "Let's go down this way."

Jarvis drew up short and looked at her.

"There's quicksand along that creek," he replied. "Don't you remember?"

Autumn laughed. "Come on! I used to find gold pebbles down there. I want to see if there are any left."

Jarvis exclaimed under his breath. "Damn it, my girl, I have no time for such fooling! Are you riding with me or are you not?"

Autumn held her horse for a moment in perplexity, then followed her father along the trail of his own choosing. One of these days, she thought to herself, it would be necessary to warn Jarvis Dean that his daughter was grown up and would not be spoken to as if she were no more than a child. But there would be time for that.

THE TEMPTATION OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 4:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin.—Hebrews 4:15.

Temptation is the common lot of all mankind (1 Cor. 10:13). The strongest and most noble of men are subject to it; angels were tempted, and our scripture reveals that even Jesus was tempted. We recognize that Jesus was tempted as the Messiah (vv. 3, 6) and as one without sin (Heb. 4:15), but it is also true that He was tempted in all points as we are, apart from sin, and that we may learn from His temptation how we may meet and be the victors over temptation.

I. What Is Temptation?

"Temptation is seduction to evil, solicitation to wrong. It stands distinguished from trial thus: trial tests, seeks to discover the man's moral qualities or character; but temptation persuades to evil, deludes, that it may ruin. God tries; Satan tempts" (A. M. Fairbairn).

Temptation is not sin, but yielding to temptation is sin. Luther said, "We cannot keep the birds from flying over our heads, but we can keep them from building nests in our hair." Temptation comes from within, that is, from our own lusts (James 1:13, 14). Satan also tempts us (Eph. 6:11). God may permit temptation as a means of proving our faith (James 1:2, 3).

II. How Temptation Works.

It is significant that the temptations of Jesus were along the three-fold line of the temptations of Adam and Eve (Gen. 3:6) and the general threefold temptation of all men, namely, the lust of the flesh, the pride of life, and the lust of the eyes (1 John 2:16). These three temptations really exhaust Satan's bag of tricks, but he can dress up these three fundamental temptations with almost endless variety. He works

1. By appealing to the flesh (vv. 2, 3). He observes the normal appetites and desires of a man's body, excites them to a high degree, and then suggests an improper method of satisfying them. Hunger is normal and a sign of good health. Jesus had fasted forty days and Satan took advantage of that fact to suggest the use of His divine power to satisfy His hunger. This would involve a denial of His entire mission on earth, namely, the redemption of man by a divine person who had become a real man.

2. By appealing to pride (vv. 5, 6). Satan misapplied Scripture to tempt Jesus to presumption on the assumption that He was exercising faith. God had promised to keep Him "in all his ways" (Ps. 91:11). To cast himself down from the temple was not one of the ways in which Christ was called to walk. Satan comes to us with the same kind of temptation. If He cannot get us to forsake faith, he tempts us to become fanatic and to proudly substitute presumption for faith.

3. By appealing to the eyes (vv. 8, 9). By showing Christ the kingdoms of the world and offering them to Him by the short-cut of a brief act of worship rather than by the way of the cross, Satan tempted Him again. Here the devil showed his true desire that man should worship him rather than God.

III. How to Meet Temptation (vv. 4, 7, 10).

1. By the right use of Scripture. If Jesus needed that weapon, how can we do without it? How can we use Scripture if we do not study it and hide it in our hearts?

2. By dependence on God. Every Scripture used by Jesus honored God. We cannot fight Satan in our own strength. To attempt to do so is to fail utterly. The real victory for the Christian is to bring Satan back to the cross where Christ won a decisive victory over him.

3. By denouncing Satan. Jesus sent him on his way. We may do the same in Jesus' name. It is always a serious error to try to argue with Satan or to engage in any discussion with him. Let us meet him with Scripture and with a "Get thee hence."

IV. The Result.

Satan left and angels came to minister to Christ. The overcoming of temptation results in peace, victory, and blessing. This is ever so in the life of the believer. Temptation overcome makes us stronger to meet the next temptation, and also enables us to help our weaker brethren.

Framing Our Lives

Religion does not consist in the performance of certain ceremonial acts at specified times, outside which acts and times it has no place; but consists in framing our whole life, and all our acts, upon a distinct view of our position as created beings, charged by the fact of our creation, with duties both to our fellow creatures and to our Creator. —Edward Denison.

Tinley Park Community NEWS

TINLEY PARK
P. T. A. NEWS

The regular P. T. A. meeting was held Friday, Oct. 6th. Our speaker for the afternoon was a Mr. Graves from the Burnham Park Recreation Center. He spoke on recreation for youth as well as adults.

Mr. Clinebell explained to us some of the bills recently passed. We were glad to hear that the State Distributive fund has been increased. This fund is used just for educational purposes.

A detailed report on the new rental system was given by the chairman, Mrs. Bennett. This system has gone over about 96%, which we think is a wonderful beginning. A rising vote of thanks was given Mr. Clinebell for the fine selection of books he was able to purchase.

Our library chairman presented Mrs. Sandige with a gift from the organization in appreciation for her services during vacation in keeping the library open for the children. She also asked if the members would save the Wrap-in-wax coupons for her. Books for the library will be purchased with the money received from the coupons.

Our membership chairman, Mrs. Bartholomew reported 182 members. The drive by the school children showed all the rooms to be 100% at the close. In appreciation for their efforts the P. T. A. will present each room with a sum of money with which to have a party.

Mrs. Rauford's room won the monthly award.
Mrs. Johnson announced that a check-up on the diptheria inoculations would be made around the first part of November. She also reported that an eye and ear examination of the children would be made shortly.

After the adjournment of the meeting, coffee and cake were served, the executive board being hostesses.

TINLEY PARK BOWLING

Next Sunday nite Tinley Park will bowl Steger in a match game at Chicago Heights alley's. Last time the teams met Tinley was victorious. Last Friday T. Davis with a 244 game and a 615 series took series money while W. Stemm took high game with 217. R. Casterline topped the 2nd fifteen with a 538 series while A. Schoeneck took high game with 185. Tinley Park Bakery winning three games moved into a tie for 1st place with Fred Goebel Insurance who won 2 games.

Bids are being received for the foundation work of the Tinley Park Methodist Church. Bids for the remaining contracts will be considered in the near future. Any contractor who is interested in any of this work is suggested to get in touch with Rev. L. E. Weinreich.

The Hi-League of the Tinley Park Methodist Church is giving a roller skating party, on the night of October 14th at Sanger Hall. Tickets can be purchased from the League members or at the hall that night. We hope every one will come as the proceeds will be used for the new church in some manner.

Mr. and Mrs. James Smart of Homewood, Illinois are parents of a son, born October 5th in the Ingalls Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. Smart is the former Ruby Simon once voted most popular girl in Tinley Park.

Mrs. Omar C. Ebenhack, local chairman of the Red Cross, accompanied by Mrs. Dennis Murphy, attended the Red Cross luncheon given by the Chicago Red Cross at the Blackstone Hotel on Wednesday of this week. This was to prepare the chairmen and workers with suggestions and helps for the Annual Roll Call which will be taken from Armistice Day to and including November thirtieth.

Arthur DeVolk of Tinley Park was united in marriage with a young lady of Roseland last Saturday. Mr. DeVolk is employed in the Fahrenheit Service Station.

Thru an error in the Rock Island time table issued when the time changed, commuters have missed one of the morning trains quite frequently. The train in question now leaves Tinley Park for Chicago daily at 8:38 A. M.

The Rock Island has also inaugurated what is known as a shoppers ticket good daily but effective only on trains due here after nine o'clock in the morning, thus the first train east bound on which this kind of ticket is honored is the train due here at 9:24 A. M.

Funeral services for the late Hans Vick former manager of the local Beatty Lumber Yard was held last Sunday from the Hirsch Brothers Funeral Home in Tinley Park. There was a large attendance. Rev. L. E. Weinreich, pastor of the Tinley Park Methodist Church officiated. Burial was made in the Vogt cemetery.

Mr. Vick was stricken with a sudden heart ailment last week Tuesday and was found unconscious in his automobile. He was rushed to the Oak Forest hospital and died there last Thursday morning without regaining consciousness.

He had no immediate relatives in this locality. He had a nephew in Canada and two brothers and a sister reside in Germany.

At the meeting of the Tinley village board Tuesday night the matter of trying to procure a PWA grant for a new and larger hall was discussed but no definite action was taken.

A daughter was born last Sunday to Mr. and Mrs. G. Dini in the Harvey hospital, but the infant died shortly after birth.

Jack Pretag who is a student in the Thornton High School has been confined to his home this week with a touch of pneumonia.

John Breitbarth has sold 80 acres of farm land located on 159th street across from the Charles Breitbarth farm to Miss Dora Daulh for an undisclosed consideration.

Mrs. Albert Ihlenfeldt has sold her farm located along 143rd street to the Cook County Forest Preserve. She in turn has purchased the former Fred Breitbarth farm.

C. Andres and party are reporting a very pleasant western trip. Friends have received cards from Mr. Andres from Pierce, Neb.

Last Sunday afternoon the Tinley Park Fire Department was called out to the former radio station site northeast of town when fire swept thru a dry corn field and a considerable amount of corn belonging to Mr. Uzemack was destroyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mager are visiting with their son Stanley in Kansas City, Mo. They made the trip by automobile.

Rev. L. E. Weinreich has returned from the Methodist conference held in Chicago the past week. He has been returned to the local charge for another year.

HOMER

Mrs. Fred Kopleman

Miss Elda Trask and her grandmother, Mrs. John Frazer have returned home from a motor trip to the East, where they visited for two weeks with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kopleman and family were Sunday dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Angelo Depra in Lockport.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Bischoff have returned from a two week's motor trip in Illinois and Wisconsin. Mr. Bischoff says that 27 years ago, when he visited in Haywood, Wis., that he had to have an Indian guide and a day's time to reach the lodge but now, with an auto and the excellent roads, the same distance can easily be covered in an hour.

Mrs. George White has received notice of the death of Mrs. John Patterson of Crown Point, Indiana. She was the former Anna Kindness and resided in Homer for some years. Her death occurred on Sept. 18. Interment at Crown Point on Sept. 20. She is survived by her husband and four children, Charles William, Helen and Eugene.

The Boys of the 4-H club were entertained in the home of William Kasper, Jr., Monday night with 9 members present. After the business session, the boys and girls enjoyed a series of games. Ice-cream, cakes and doughnuts were served by William's mother and father. The November meeting will be in the home of Katie Warnholdt.

Mrs. Charles Hill is a medical patient in Silver Cross hospital in Joliet.

The Homer unit of the Home Bureau met in the Homer church dining room Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Edith Huffman, home advisor, presented a very interesting lesson on "Personal Problems in Dress Design—the Silhouette." Mrs. Robert Burch followed with the minor project "Home Made Christmas Presents." Four guests were present. Refreshments were served at quartet tables. The November meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. Edward Beaver. Mrs. Wm. Lister and Mrs. Fred Kopleman attended the school for leaders in Joliet Friday.

John Winke has accepted a position at Elgin, Illinois.

Mrs. Fred Paddock and Mrs. Wm. Ross returned home Wednesday evening from their trip to Jacksonville. Mrs. Paddock gave an interesting report of the conference at the church service Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Bump visited Tuesday with their daughter and family in Wheeling.

The Wayside Workers Circle of King's Daughters were entertained Thursday afternoon in the home of Mrs. H. B. Reid with 11 members and 2 guests present. An interesting program was presented with Mrs. Helen Rowley in charge of the devotionals and Mrs. Fred Trask in charge of the program. An election of officers was held, which resulted as follows: President Mrs. Bertha Bigelow, Vice President Mrs. Fred Blodgett, Secretary Mrs. Fred Kopleman, Treasurer Mrs. Fred Paddock.

Mrs. Reed served delicious refreshments at the close of the afternoon.

Two auto loads of young people from the Homer church will attend a conference at North Aurora church on Tuesday afternoon and evening of this week.

The Woodman Hall Company met Monday night and planned a Feather Dance at their hall in Goodings Grove on Nov. 4.

Mr. Dean McClintock is seriously ill at his home.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred West of Rockford, Mrs. Fred Blodgett and daughters, Mrs. Morrison and Mrs. Heusing of Delwood Highlands, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Renstrom of Oak Park were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jensen Sunday.

Mrs. Margaret Clark of California is visiting at the home of her brother Charles Dale and family.

Mr. and Mrs. West entertained in honor of their sister, Mrs. Charles Jensen's birthday anniversary Tuesday evening. Dinner was served at 7 o'clock with covers laid for 11.

Mrs. B. F. Ingersold spent the week-end with a former friend, Mrs. Reniff in Morris.

Services at the Homer Congregational church will be held on Sunday evening, Oct. 22, with Rev. C. E. Wolsted in charge. This will be the Communion service. Sermon topic is "The Book of a Thousand Tongues," Psalms 119:129-144.

The annual State Gleaner meeting was held in Joliet last week. Mr. and Mrs. James Bell represented the Maple Street Arbor as their delegates; Others on the program from the local Arbor were Louise Storm, who gave a group of solos; Marilyn DeZee, a reading and Miss Isabel Anderson helped with the Memorial service for Mr. Orr. Others present from the Arbor were Mr. and Mrs. J. Frazer and daughter, Jeanne, Peter and Kathryn Hays, Mrs. A. Sproat and children, Mr. and Mrs. B. Ingersol, Mrs. Ira Anderson and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Rhinehardt Krohn and Mrs. Fred Blodgett. Mr. and Mrs. Halbert Moody from Fairfield, Ill. were guests the fore part of the week of Mrs. Charles Jensen. Tuesday they visited Brookfield Zoo.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Sermandl and daughters of Chicago were dinner guests Sunday at the Walter Konow home.

FRANKFORT

Mrs. Herbert Kohlhaugen

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mark are the proud parents of a son born on Oct. 1.

A pretty autumn wedding took place on Sat. Oct. 7 at 2 o'clock in the parsonage of St. Peter's Evangelical and Reform Church by Rev. Gerhold, when Miss Irene Haefke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Haefke, became the bride of Mr. Roy Fredin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Fredin. The couple was attended by Miss Dorothy Haefke and Mr. Robert Fredin. Both parents of the bride and the groom were present at the ceremony. A reception was enjoyed by the immediate families in the home of the bride's parents. They will make their home in Lansing, Ill. The community extends their best wishes for the future.

On Friday October 6 the Public School was the scene of a very interesting feature. They held a fair in which the pupils had an opportunity to display their pets, handiwork, hobbies, and products. The pupils gave a short program, which was followed by a dog parade, doll parade and special numbers by pets. Blue, red and white ribbons were awarded by judges to what they considered the best. A sale of candy, popcorn and doughnuts was held. The evening was full of excitement for the old as well as the young.

The Frankfort soft ball team played the Lincoln Estate team Sunday afternoon. The boys enjoyed a rather good social game and thus closed their year.

The Frankfort Unit of the Home Bureau will give a card party in St. Mary's Hall in Mokena on Friday evening Oct. 13 at 8 o'clock. Pinochle and bunco will be played. Refreshments will be served.

The North Center P. T. A. will have their meeting on Oct. 20th at 8 o'clock in District 152. Miss Harmening is the teacher. They will have election of officers. Pinochle and bunco will be played. Mrs. Wm. Rahm and Mrs. Koche form the entertainment committee for the evening.

Mrs. Henry Bridert will entertain the Frankfort Women's Club in her home on October 19.

The Frankfort Civic Club met on Monday Oct. 9 to make further preparations for the Mardi Gras celebration they plan on giving in the public school on Oct. 27 and 28. They expect to have a parade and many elaborate features. They are making every effort to make these nights a gala time for everyone. Don't forget the dates.

The Rock River Conference of the Methodist Church held its One Hundredth annual session in Saint James Church, Chicago from Tuesday Oct. 3 through Sunday the 8th. Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Bettenhausen and Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Kohlhagen attended the Sunday Service, when Bishop E. L. Waldorf, preached on the subject, "Saints in Wrong Places." A large robed choir of 100 voices furnished the musical program.

Quite a number of changes have been made. The local Methodist Church will have as their pastor Rev. Rudolph Malek of Aurora, Bethal Church. Rev. C. F. Schellhase goes to Pecatonica, Ill.

Rev. Malek is not a stranger here since he has occupied the pulpit at various times.

SAFETYGRAMS

With the coming of the new sealed beam headlight it is going to be more important than ever that motorists who have this type of light dim their lights when approaching oncoming cars. More and better light will be given by this improved headlight, which makes it more convenient for the driver of the car; but it will be necessary that he dim his lights so that they will not obscure the vision of the drivers coming in the opposite direction.

Courtesy is the answer. It will promote safety for everybody.

WHEN GRANDFATHER TRIED TO SHOUT ACROSS TOWN

• The clear, quick, dependable telephone service we enjoy today didn't just happen; it is the result of more than 60 years' hard work on the part of the men and women of your Telephone Company.

Improvements and enlargements in telephone service have been continuous. Today, Illinois Bell telephones number 1,400,000—and telephoning is easy enough for small children to learn. Telephone service is so cheap that we use it for minor as well as important messages—to save time, trouble, worry and expense! 23,000 men and women of the Illinois Bell Telephone Company operate and maintain your facilities with unceasing care and vigilance. To them, the telephone business is an opportunity to serve—their devotion to it has helped bring you more service, and better service, at the lowest possible cost!

Announcing THE NEW FORD CARS FOR 1940

22 important improvements, added to fundamental Ford features, represent the most advanced engineering in the low-price field

WHAT do the Ford cars for 1940 offer to match their brilliant new beauty? New comfort, convenience, quiet, safety—and the roomiest, richest interiors ever designed for a Ford car.

They have a host of interesting new features. Finger-Tip Gearshift on the steering post. An improved transmission, unusually easy to shift. New Controlled Ventilation. Improved shock absorbers. Softer springs, improved spring suspension and a new ride-stabilizer.*

A combination of new features makes the new cars quieter in operation. They have big, powerful hydraulic brakes. They have new Sealed-Beam Headlamps that are safer, stronger and stay bright longer. They have the famous Ford V-8 engine (85 hp in the De Luxe Ford. Choice of 85 or 60 hp in the Ford)—which blends 8-cylinder smoothness with economy.

You've never seen cars with so much performance, style and comfort at such a low price. Get acquainted. You'll enjoy the experience!

22 IMPORTANT FORD FEATURES

FOR COMFORT—More room inside. New Controlled Ventilation. New torsion bar ride-stabilizer.* Improved spring suspension.* Self-sealing shock absorbers. Two-way adjustable driver's seat. New-type resilient front seat backs. New "Floating-Edge" Seat Cushions.

FOR CONVENIENCE—New Finger-Tip Gearshift. Engine more accessible. Two-spoke steering wheel.

FOR SAFETY—Sealed-Beam Headlamps. Dual windshield wipers at base of windshield. Larger battery. Battery Condition Indicator on all models.

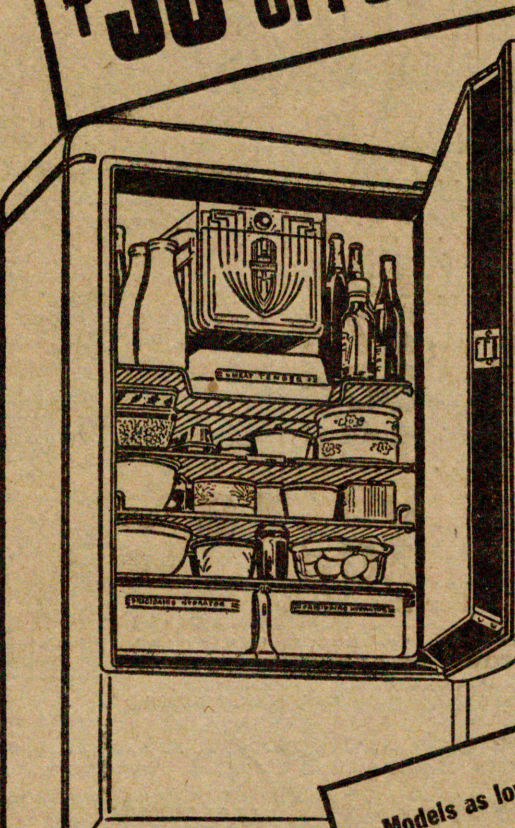

FOR SILENCE—Improved soundproofing. "Easy-shift" transmission. Curved disc wheels. Improved drums for big Ford hydraulic brakes.

FOR STYLE—New exterior beauty. New interior luxury. New instrument panel. *85-hp models only

Pay As You Save

Let us show you proof that you can save $10 a month this winter with a new

Frigidaire

with the Meter-Miser

• These are absolute facts! "Makeshift" refrigeration methods are costly as well as dangerous. For even in winter, temperatures are seldom within the food-safety zone of 32 to 50 degrees. U. S. Weather Bureau records bear that statement out. And, unless foods are kept within that safety zone, they spoil quickly—and that means a direct loss of money!

By ending these losses, you can save as much as $10 a month with a new Frigidaire. That's the figure that present Frigidaire owners estimated they were saving as proved by a national survey of over 58,000 women. So we say—by buying your new Frigidaire now—you'll save $50 this winter. Come and let us prove it to you!

ONLY FRIGIDAIRE HAS THE METER-MISER!

Simplest refrigerating mechanism ever built! Whisper-quiet. Unseen. Trouble-free. Cuts current cost to the bone!

HOW THE DAVIDSONS LICKED THE 4 BIG JOBS — WITH GAS!

"Things weren't always so pleasant for us, no-siree. For between our furnace and cooking cases, and our hot water and refrigeration problems, we had 4 big jobs staring us in the face every day... all day. But that's all past, now. The way Gas has licked those 4 big jobs is nothing short of a miracle.

Millions of smart folks are getting wise—they let gas do the 4 big jobs... automatically and inexpensively."

1 GAS FOR WATER HEATING

"No more waiting, watching or disappointments now that we've got an automatic gas water heater. Just a turn of a faucet gives us plenty of piping hot water—instantly. Always ready, day or night, for a hundred and one household uses."

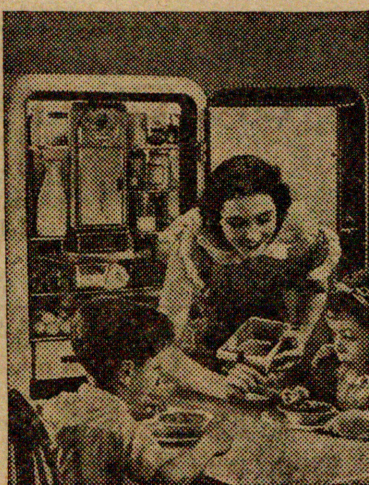

2 GAS FOR HOUSE HEATING

"We've said goodbye to furnace cares... thanks to clean, carefree Gas Heat. No more shoveling or worry—no ashes to haul—no soot or dirt. We fire the furnace from the easy chair by merely adjusting a thermostat on the wall."

3 GAS FOR REFRIGERATION

"There's never a peep from our handsome, silent Gas refrigerator. And no wonder, for it hasn't any moving parts to wear or make a noise. That means longer life and extra savings, too!"

4 GAS FOR COOKING

"We took one look at a modern C/P Gas Range and it almost won us on its looks alone. But when we discovered how it saved time, fuel and food, how it cooked foods better, faster, easier... then we knew that was the range we wanted."

ORLAND PARK

Mischiefous youngsters have been breaking street light bulbs with sling shots and the Public Service Company has lodged a complaint with the Orland Park village board that of late they have had to replace quite a number of light bulbs. At the meeting of the board held Monday night a resolution was adopted that the use of sling shots in the village be prohibited and if the guilty ones are found they will be obliged to pay for damage done.

The Orland Park girls basketball team will start practice soon and expect to have a much stronger team with the addition of a few players. They will open the season against Oak Forest the first part of November.

The following names of three charter members of the Orland Park RNA were inadvertently omitted from the writeup in last week's paper relative to the 40th birthday observance of the Orland camp: Mrs. Kate Cox, Mrs. Ella Myrick and Mrs. Wagner.

Mrs. Mabel Egberg entertained at a miscellaneous shower at the Swedish Coffee Shop Tuesday night in honor of Miss LaVerne Murphy and her approaching marriage to Harry Hallahan on October 28th in the St. Michael church in Orland Park. The bride-to-be received many pretty and useful gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Sayers who have been spending the summer here visiting with relatives and friends, returned last Wednesday to St. Petersburg, Florida. They had also been visiting with relatives in Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

The annual supper and bazaar sponsored by the Ladies Guild of the Orland Park Methodist church last Thursday afternoon and evening was very largely attended. Over 300 persons were served. All articles on sale were disposed of and in all the affair was a success in every way.

The Ladies Guilds of the South Suburban group met in an all day session in the Methodist Church in Chicago Heights on Tuesday. The gathering was very largely attended. The next meeting of this group will be held in the Orland Park Methodist church next spring.

Mr. and Mrs. George Gore and children Arthur and Dorothy, of Pontiac, Ill., spent the week-end with the latter's parents Mr. and Mrs. George Gee, Sr., and helped to surprise Mr. Gee on his 71st birthday, Saturday Oct. 7.

Others present at the party were Mr. and Mrs. George Gee, Jr. and their children Virginia and George, III, of Orland, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gee and children Ruth, Edward, Jr., and Gloria, of Orland, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gee and children Barbara, Charlotte, Mae, Joseph, Jr., and Kenneth of Mokena.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Gee and son Donald of Orland, and Mr. and Mrs. James Gee of Chicago.

ORLAND HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

School remained closed Thursday in observance of Columbus Day.

The freshmen girls played against the boys in baseball Monday, but the game was called on account of rain. At that time the girls had no score. The sophomore girls will play against the boys on Wednesday.

Six week tests will be given this week and report cards will be issued the first of next week.

We have a new bulletin board in the entrance hall. All notices of club meetings and other things of importance will be written on it.

The Science Club had its first meeting scheduled for last Monday.

MOKENA

Henry Schweser is slowly recovering from serious burns on his hands sustained when an oil stove in his home exploded a week ago Sunday. He was home alone at the time and succeeded in getting the fire out even though he sustained painful burns in doing so.

A wave of petty thieving has been sweeping Mokena the past week. Last Wednesday night the Edward Marti home on Front street was entered. The dresser drawers were ransacked and some cake and pie taken. The Kenneth Brown and Harold Spiess home on the same street were also entered but nothing of value taken. It is suspected that home talent is at the bottom of the miniature crime wave.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Krapp who have been visiting with the former's father, Emil P. Krapp, have returned to their home in Cable, Wis. They report quite cold weather there, the thermometer falling to 10 above about a week ago.

Rene Guindon is now employed as foreman of a printing shop in Chicago Heights.

A bunco and card party will be held by the St. Mary Parish at the St. Mary Hall on Wolf road on Saturday night, October 20th.

Miss Evelyn Moore of Mokena, Ill. has been invited to exhibit her "Cat-Rabbit" at the Washington School P. T. A. Carnival to be held Thursday, Oct. 19th, four till Nine P. M.

Washington School is located on Richards St. at Fourth Ave. in Joliet, Ill.

The Sunday school teachers and the Young People's League of the St. John Evangelical church held a pre-nuptial shower in the parlors of the church Monday night in honor of Miss Violet Knudson who is to be married Sunday, October 15th to Walter Lauffer. The bride-to-be was presented with a very nice occasional chair by the Sunday School teachers and with a pretty electric table lamp by the League members. The affair was a complete surprise to the bride-to-be.

Mrs. John Mattes who suffered injuries in a fall in her home, is improving.

Mrs. Everett Cooper entertained the Catholic Ladies Aid Society Thursday afternoon in her home.

Mrs. Albert Schmuhl entertained the Monthly Card Club last Thursday afternoon. Those receiving prizes were Mrs. Fred Cappel, Mrs. Wm. Drake and Mrs. A. Steen.

This Friday night a card party under the sponsorship of the Frankfort unit of the Home Bureau will be held in the St. Mary Hall on Wolf Road.

Mrs. Clarence Mast was hostess to the Eno 500 Club in her home last Wednesday afternoon. Prize winners were Mrs. Fred Klatt, Mrs. Peter Mancke and Mrs. Barney Hostet.

Mrs. James Bickley entertained at a birthday party Sunday afternoon in honor of her daughter Barbara. A most pleasant time was reported by all attending.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gee gave a dinner Tuesday evening Oct. 10 in honor of their son Kenneth's 6th birthday. The guests were the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Koeller of Mokena and Mr. and Mrs. George Gee, Sr. of Orland.

The occasion was also the 45th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. George Gee, Sr.

LINCOLN ESTATES

Elizabeth Goering

Mr. John Kay of Chicago spent Sunday and Monday at the Goerings home.

Loretta Modeen, Rose Sluiter, Don Williams, Chuck Winger, Howard Williams, Jean Tyler, Pat Tyler, Hank Sluiter, Ed. Bodong and Kise Shuter spent Friday evening at Batchlers groves roller skating rink. All had a good time.

Miss Loretta Modeen spent Sunday at the Tylers home.

Miss Doris Tyler spent Saturday with Elizabeth Goerings.

Elizabeth Goering spent Sunday at the Tylers home.

Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Jensen and children visited the Madsen home. They are from St. Charles.

An accident occurred in Lincoln Estates on Lincoln Highway Saturday Oct. 7th. A car was passing up another car on a hill when a Semite truck came over the hill. The car passing the other pushed the car in the ditch and it rolled over and bounced on its side. The lady in the car got her shoulder hurt and so did the man.

PALOS PARK

By Miss Ruby Stockdale

Oak Hills, Golf Club, the home of the daily fee player was the scene of three fall tournaments last week. The Blue Island Golf Association held their harvest tournament and party last Wednesday. The Association has been holding tournaments twice a month for the past few years and have quite a bit of interest in the club.

Oak Hills Club have had several tournaments each month and is now finishing up with a few more fall tournaments. As long as the weather is nice the shop, locker rooms and restaurant will remain open. It is undecided as to whether the buildings will remain open a few days in November or close at the end of October, however, anyone wishing to play golf after that time, may still have use of the grounds.

The Builders Tee Club, held their last tournament of the season last Tuesday. This golf club has been holding tournaments once a month for the past few years.

The Interlake Steel and Wire, Golf Club, that welcome's Oak Hills every time with at least 200 or 250 players, will play again in a tournament on Saturday, October 14. The members have planned to be off at eight o'clock instead of one.

During the season there have been a few people from Palos visiting the club, who come out in a foursome and play at least 18 holes. Last Saturday and Sunday the grounds were filled with players wishing to get in another good game while the weather is nice. On Sunday morning the players were held up one hour waiting their turn to tee off.

Palos Boy Scout, Troop 699 are holding a parent night at the Palos Park Community Church on Friday evening, Oct. 13. Everyone is invited to attend.

Patricia Saunders has gone to De Kalb, where she is attending school.

Albert Troyke spent Saturday evening visiting his relation in Lombard.

Norman Troyke was united in marriage last Saturday evening. Palos Spoolsters, sewing club meetings have been postponed until further notice. Each member will be notified of the next meeting and social.

Annual Home Bureau Meeting

The Will County Home Bureau is now just one year old and the first annual meeting has just been planned to be held at the Community Hall in Elwood on Friday, October 20.

Miss Mary Louise Chase of the Extension Service will be the principal speaker of the day. Miss Chase just completed a study of extension activities abroad last summer and fall and will tell of the work in these European countries and, also, of the preparedness preparations as she saw them while there.

Crusty, piping hot bran muffins are family favorites.
See Recipe Below.

For a Special Treat Serve Hot Breads

Was there ever a family that didn't adore hot breads? Biscuits that melt in your mouth, muffins that are feather-light and crusty and full of flavor, or a golden corn bread with the tantalizing taste of bacon to make it even more delicious—all these are special treats for a hungry family.

Serve hot muffins or flaky biscuits at the next church supper or the first fall dinner meeting of the guild, and watch them disappear like snowflakes on a warm spring day.

It's easy to achieve success with hot breads if you'll follow just a few basic rules. A tested recipe, good ingredients, accurate measurements, deft handling, and the proper temperature for baking are the factors of success.

If you've had difficulty with quick breads that are coarse textured and full of the long holes called "tunnels" in all probability you've been over-conscious in mixing. Unless otherwise specified, mix lightly and only enough to blend the ingredients.

When you're making baking powder biscuits, remember that a little kneading goes a long way toward making biscuits flaky and light.

A simple recipe for baking powder biscuit is the starting point for a variety of tempting breads. Make "Pinwheels" by rolling out biscuit dough to 1/4-inch thickness, brushing with melted butter, and spreading generously with grated cheese, deviled ham, or thick jam. Roll up the dough as for jelly-roll, cut in slices, and bake in a hot oven (425 degrees).

Quick Butterscotch Rolls are made in the same fashion.

Ginger Cheese Muffins.

2 cups cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon soda
1/2 teaspoon ginger
1/2 teaspoon salt
3/4 cup cheese (grated)
1 egg (beaten)
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup molasses
1/4 cup butter (melted)

Mix and sift all dry ingredients. Add grated cheese. Blend egg, milk, molasses, and melted butter. Pour this mixture slowly into the dry ingredients and mix lightly. Fill well greased muffin tins approximately 3/4 full and bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) for 12 to 15 minutes.

Old-fashioned Nut and Raisin Bread.

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
2 cups bread flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
3/4 cup milk
1/4 cup seedless raisins
1/4 cup nutmeats (broken)

Cream butter and add sugar. Mix and sift all dry ingredients and add alternately with the milk. Mix lightly and fold in the raisins and nuts. Place batter in a well-greased loaf pan, let stand 20 minutes, and then bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for approximately one hour.

Quick German Coffee Cake.

(Makes 1 coffee cake)
1/4 cup shortening
1/2 cup sugar
2 eggs (well beaten)
1 1/2 cups and 1 tablespoon flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/2 cup nut meats (chopped)
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon butter

Cream shortening; add sugar slowly while beating constantly. Add eggs and blend. Mix and sift together 1 1/2 cups flour, salt and baking powder and add alternately with milk. Mix lightly with a fork. Place half of dough in well-greased layer cake pan. Mix together brown sugar, chopped nuts, remaining 1 tablespoon flour, cinnamon and butter. Sprinkle 3/4 of this mixture over dough. Top with remaining dough; sprinkle with remaining brown sugar mixture. Bake in moderately hot oven (375 degrees) for approximately 30 minutes. Serve while warm.

Refrigerator Parkerhouse Rolls.

(Makes 3 dozen Parkerhouse rolls)
2 cups boiling water
1/2 cup and 1 teaspoon sugar
1 tablespoon salt
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons lard
2 cakes compressed yeast
1/4 cup lukewarm water
2 eggs
8 cups flour

Mix together boiling water, 1/2 cup sugar, salt, butter and lard. Cool slightly. Dissolve yeast and 1 teaspoon sugar in the lukewarm water and add. Add eggs and one-half of the flour; beat thoroughly. Then add remaining flour. Mix well. Place in refrigerator. When ready to use roll dough about 3/4 inch thick and cut in circles. Then cut each circle almost in two. Turn circle of dough so that cut side is on the outside. Spread inside with melted butter and fold. Let rise until doubled in bulk. Then bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) approximately 20 minutes.

Skillet Corn Bread.

(Makes one 9-inch bread)
1 1/2 cups general purpose flour
1 1/2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 tablespoons baking powder
1 1/2 cups yellow corn meal
3 eggs (beaten)
1 1/2 cups milk
Bacon

Sift together the flour, sugar, salt and baking powder. Stir in the corn meal. Combine the eggs and milk, and blend with the dry ingredients. Pour into a greased, 9-inch skillet. Arrange bacon slices, lattice-fashion, over the top. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees) for 50 to 60 minutes. If necessary, the bread may be placed in the broiler for a few minutes to brown the bacon.

Molasses All-Brin Muffins.

(Makes 1 dozen muffins)
2 cups bran
1/2 cup molasses
1 1/2 cups milk
1 egg (beaten)
1 cup flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon soda

Add bran to molasses and milk and allow to soak for 15 minutes. Beat egg and add to first mixture. Sift flour, salt and soda together and combine with bran mixture. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full and bake in moderately hot oven (400 degrees) about 20 minutes.

Strange Facts

Adam's Day
Slow in Anger
Spotted Aristocrats

The world's 250,000,000 Moslems observe Friday as their Sabbath because, according to Mohammed, this was the day Adam was created, the day he entered and was also expelled from Paradise, the day of his repentance, the day of his death and the day he will be resurrected.

Chameleons are "slow-motion" fighters. When two enemies start a battle, many minutes, even hours, pass between each thrust and parry. Sometimes the only way that one can tell a fight is in progress is by the color of their skins, which have turned black with rage.

Increasing age diminishes attendance at the movies to an astonishing degree. Surveys indicate that the number who no longer attend increases from 50 per cent at the age of forty to 75 per cent at sixty to 98 per cent at eighty.

Although about nine thousand members of Britain's aristocracy and sporting world are admitted to the Royal Enclosure at Ascot, England, at each meeting, thousands are excluded because they are in bankruptcy, involved in a divorce, owe too much money to a bookmaker or have not been presented at a royal court.—Collier's.

One Rightness

Rightness expresses of actions, what straightness does of lines; and there can no more be two kinds of right action than there can be two kinds of straight lines.—Herbert Spencer.

AROUND the HOUSE

Items of Interest to the Housewife

Shiny Windows.—A lump of starch dissolved in the water with which windows are to be washed will make the glass shine.

Tight Curtain Springs.—To tighten springs in curtain rollers, hold the rollers firmly and with pincers tighten the end springs.

Distributing Bluing.—When making blue-water, try adding a little common salt. This helps to distribute the color evenly and prevents the clothes from looking streaked and patchy.

Apple Fritters.—Pare several apples, slice them, sprinkle the slices with sugar and allow them to stand in a cold place for an hour. Meanwhile, make a batter from one cup flour, two beaten eggs, one-half cup milk, one grated lemon rind, two tablespoons sugar and one-fourth teaspoon salt. Dip the cold apple slices in the batter and fry in deep fat. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve.

Flowered Hat Came To Do Double Duty

A young matron found herself somewhat hustled by the number and variety of her engagements.

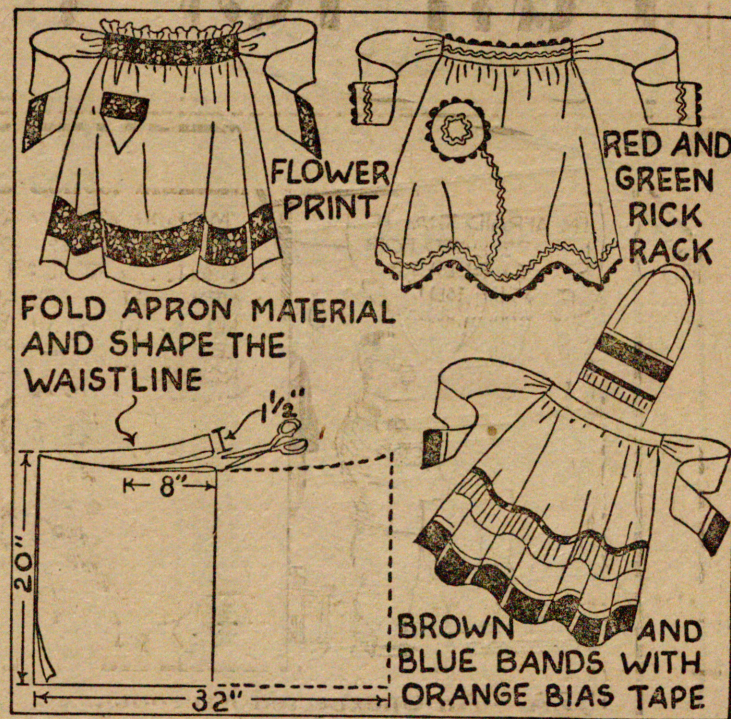

One day in particular she found troublesome, for she had to go first to a funeral service and then to a garden party.

She solved the dress problem by wearing smart but sober clothes and taking in a hat box a flowered hat which, during the service, she placed in the vestry.

Her sense of quiet pleasure at this successful solution of the problem was somewhat marred, however, when the coffin was brought into church. For reposing in the center of the wreaths on the coffin was her flowered hat.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Gay aprons from unbleached muslin.

Every one who has ever lived in the country knows the possibilities of unbleached muslin. The source of supply there is flour and food sacks but even purchased by the yard it is an inexpensive, sturdy material for aprons and many other things.

If you have friends who share your enthusiasm for interesting aprons, plan and cut them in a group; then trimmings may be exchanged and every piece-bag will produce something.

The diagram shown here gives you cutting dimensions for the skirt part of a plain little apron and shows how to shape the waistline. Belts for the bibless type are rather wide now—two or two and a half inches finished. Ties are generally 4-inches wide and as long as you like. Now, do be daring when you come to pockets or adding a bib. Try an idea of your own. These gay unbleached muslin aprons are just suggestions to get you started.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The new Sewing Booklet which Mrs. Spears has prepared for our readers, contains thirty-two new and original ideas for homemakers. To get one of these useful booklets, simply address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill., with name and address, and 10 cents in coin; booklet will be postpaid by return mail.

Treaty Language

French is still the language used in treaties concluded between more than two powers. French is employed also in the third copy of treaties drawn between two countries in their own languages, the French translation to be decisive in case of a difference of opinion as to the precise meaning of the other texts.—Collier's.

MOKENA SCHOOL NEWS

Room 1

The first grade has been working on a doll house for the past three weeks. They painted the outside of an orange crate and with paper of their own design, papered the inside. They have made beds, tables, and chairs. They are now weaving rugs for the floors. The whole room has enjoyed the activity.

The September attendance for the primary room was 95%.

Room 2

The pupils of the intermediate room were sorry to have Keith Rabinov, one of their playmates, leave Mokena School. He now attends Cleveland School.

An attractive border has been made of posters, stems, and leaves. The Junior Red Cross met in the intermediate room Thursday after school. Plans were made for the coming year. All members are to learn the pledge and the song of the Junior Red Cross. This year's officers of the organization are: Patricia Bennett, president; Raymond McGuire, vice-president; Shirley Nelson, secretary; and Gunter Thiel, treasurer.

The attendance for the intermediate room during September was 98.9%; tardy cases numbered three.

Room 3

Mrs. Herbert Bruns was a visitor in our room last Tuesday afternoon. The eighth grade have given some very interesting talks on trips they took this summer. Jean Shevlin visited friends in Memphis, Tennessee, and told us about the life in the cotton fields. Virginia Nebeker spent her summer in the East and in parts of Canada. She was one of few who saw the preparation of the Canadian soldiers for war. David Rabinov took a trip through the West, stopping at the San Francisco World's Fair and with relatives in Los Angeles. John Roesner visited his grandmother in New York City and spent much time sight-seeing, particularly at the World's Fair.

Marjorie Marti spoke on a trip she took to the Ozark Mountains and Arkansas. She visited many points of interest enroute. Ludwig Mueller spent three weeks in the South, mostly in Alabama. Because these talks were given with colorful descriptions, the room was fortunate in coming in close contact with many sections of the country.

In the junior high attendance for September reached 97.3% with two cases of tardiness.

Room 4

Put on your thinking cap, everybody; see if you can guess who this tall, dark Romeo is. He is about six feet tall, weighs 150 pounds, and has dark hair and dark eyes. He goes in for sports, particularly baseball. His favorite subject? Recese!

News

Edward Tierney is a late entrant into the high school. He is a transfer from the St. James Trade School in Springfield. Edward brings the high school enrollment to 36.

We hear the E. E. S. lost a bag of marbles. We wonder why he had them and where he lost them. The freshmen have written notebooks for geography. To improve your knowledge of the subject, consult those which are on display.

We wonder why C. R. G. and R. L. B. go to Frankfort so much. Did you know that W. S. has naturally curly hair?

Why does C. R. get an encyclopedia so many times a day? Is it because of the boy who sits across from them?

The high school attendance for last month was 97.6% with three cases of tardiness.

Sports

A meeting was called by Mr. Dunn last week about this year's basketball teams, there was a good turnout for both grade and high schools. At this point of the season it looks like Mokena will have two good teams again this year. Practice will start Tuesday, October 10; however, the first game will not be until the early part of November. Watch for the date so that you can be among the supporters and boosters of your teams.

Friday 13th Unlucky for Rats

"Quite a bit of interest has been shown in the rat extermination campaign conducted by the Cook County Farm Bureau and the U. S. D. A. Biological Survey," states Farm Adviser C. A. Hughes. "The latest date that co-operators can get their orders in for bait is Saturday, Oct. 7. By this time letters to practically every farmer in the county have been mailed out with a card enclosed to be returned giving the amount of bait wanted. In practically every township of the county a distributing point for the bait on October 13 has been assigned. These distribution points are:

Farm Bureau office—Blue Island.
Lake-Cook Farm Supply—Tinley Park.

Chas. Erickson farm—Wolf Road South of 179th St.

Fred Yunker farm—Wolf Road South of 151st St.

John Zmuda filling station—55th St. West of Brainard.

Harvey Adair farm—Cottage Grove near Lincoln Highway.

Lemont Implement Co.—Lemont.

D. A. Nietfeldt farm—Western N. of Olympia Golf Course.

Frank Diekmann farm—147th near Michigan City Road.

Wm. Heatherwick farm—131st West of 104th St.

"The poison bait will be prepared by the Biological Survey and each package will consist of about 1 1/4 pound or 100 baits and will be furnished at cost which is 35c per package. Farmers who come after this bait should be prepared to pay for it in the exact amount as there are no profits in handling this material. Each package contains one half fish and one half meat bait."

Here's First Glimpse of 1940 Ford

THE wheels are turning at the big Ford Rouge plant and off the assembly lines are coming these new Ford V-8 cars for 1940. Illustrated is the front end of the deluxe Ford V-8. The new cars are big, substantial and powerful in appearance. Front end designs are distinctively modern, bodies gracefully streamlined. New features include a finger-tip gearshift on the steering column, a controlled ventilation system, improved double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers and Sealed-Beam headlights. Deluxe cars have an improved spring suspension, softer springs front and rear and a new torsion bar ride-stabilizer. Emphasis in interior styling is on fine appointments and upholstery.
